Nutrition, Food Safety and Health Extension Agent

Johnson County Extension is recruiting a Nutrition, Food Safety and Health Extension Agent whose responsibilities will include:

Nutrition, Food Safety and Health programming

- Collaborating with community partners to engage in educational programs around nutrition, food safety and health activities
- Managing and promoting “JoCo EATS” (Johnson County - Easy, Affordable, Tasty Solutions)
- Overseeing the county’s Kitchen Restore program, a community donation initiative with the mission of providing “starter kits” containing new or gently used kitchen tools/equipment to individuals and families
- Conducting Serve Safe & Food Handlers courses
- Coordinating the annual Walk Kansas program for the county
- Co-supervising a full-time administrative program assistant
- Tracking and reporting data gathered at programs/events
- Supporting the Johnson County 4-H Youth Development team’s educational activities related to Nutrition, Food Safety and Health.
- Potentially leading SNAP-Ed program development to support low-income Kansans by providing health education and promoting community policies, systems and environments that support healthy behaviors

The Extension Master Food Volunteer program

- Supervising the county’s Extension Master Food Volunteer (EMFV) program, which strives to improve health, food safety awareness, and quality of life for Johnson County residents by providing current, research-based information to the public
- Collaborating with the Johnson County EMFV advisory board
- Planning and coordinating the yearly EMFV class schedule
- Coordinating with office staff to market and provide administrative support for the program (e.g., online registration, class materials/supplies, social media content, program promotion)
